One of the major challenges facing any growing organization is bringing all its diverse functions into perfect sync with each other. Too often, islands of information exist within an organization, which in turn, create bottlenecks between departments. Indeed, in the age of information, the need to channel data smoothly and thoroughly is integral to success. ERP (Enterprise Resource Planning) is a crucial stepping-stone to achieving that success in today's business environment. An international standard for implementing high-quality business processes, it enables companies to integrate their driver functions into a lightly-knit whole.
